CHICAGO'S MUSIC CIRCLES MOURN FREDERICK STOCK: Orchestra Director Dies of Heart Attack.

By CLAUDIA CASSIDY

The bottom dropped out of Chicago's music life when Frederick Stock, director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, died of a heart attack in his home, 1252 Astor street, shortly before noon on Tuesday. He was 48 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Stock, the former Russian violinist, and his daughter, Vera, who is Mrs. Arthur, were to be held in the Fourth Presbyterian church at 1:30 this afternoon. Dr. William Anderson, the pastor, will be in charge of the services and will be in charge of the orchestra.

Drury Lane Thursday night at Orchestra hall Mr. Stock had launched the Chicago Symphony orchestra on a new, all-night tour, talking over plans for the season with Henry E. Vogel, business manager, and had been working as a conductor for 38 years. Mr. Stock arrived yesterday to take an appointment to meet Mr. Vogel tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Stunned by the death of his friend, and by the loss to the orchestra he served for 38 years, Dr. Anderson said:

"It is impossible to say anything about his death, but it is a shock to his friends and the entire music world."

Famous Conductor Dies in Harness.

As one of the most creative musicians in the world, Mr. Stock is considered one of the most celebrated conductors in the world. He is known for his ability to bring out the best in his orchestra and to create music that is both beautiful and inspirational.

Mr. Stock was a great musician, well respected and feared by his peers and admired by his students. He was a true artist who dedicated his life to the love of music and to sharing it with the world.

The concert was marked by a touching tribute to Mr. Stock, with the orchestra playing one of his favorite pieces. The crowd was moved by the beauty of the music and the emotions it evoked.

The concert was a fitting tribute to a man who has dedicated his life to the art of music and to the joy it brings to all who experience it. Mr. Stock will be deeply missed, but his legacy will live on through the music he created and the memories he left behind.

FUND GETS FLOWER MONEY

Mr. Stock's family asked for flowers to be sent to the funeral home as a tribute to the beloved conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The request was made in an effort to ensure that the money which would be spent on flowers would be used to benefit the orchestra. The Orchestrual Association for the Frederic Stock scholarship fund. This is a scholarship fund that has been established to honor Mr. Stock's memory and to provide a quarter of a century to help young musicians.

The paxbearers are all members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The honor bearers are leaders of Illinois music, business, and financial circles.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.
Dr. Frederick Stock, director of the Chicago Symphony orchestra since 1905, who died yesterday of a heart attack. He would have been 70 years old on Nov. 11.

(Story on page 7.)