Arnold Jacobs early in his career

Dear Friends,

The Arnold Jacobs family greatly appreciates your presence today at this wonderful tribute for our loved one. We thank Henry Fogel and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra members, colleagues, students, and all who will participate.

We are grateful for the variety of sentiments bestowed upon us from so many of you. The plants, flowers, cards, letters, and phone calls we received—and are still receiving—from all over the world are happy reminders of the love, affection, admiration, and friendship so many had for our dear Arnold, and in some ways for his family.

Letters from many who studied with him say that when they are playing or teaching, Arnold seems to be right there with them, his voice guiding them. We must believe this is not the "end of an era," but through them, the contribution of the Arnold Jacobs tradition and method of teaching will exist for generations to come.

Arnold's sudden death left the family and the world stunned, shocked, and heartbroken, but our memories will keep him alive. While we will have tearful moments, we must also rejoice for him, for the new life he entered is free from pain and he has perfect vision again.

That grand orchestra in heaven needed another tuba player, and Arnold quickly answered the call, joining his old buddies in a joyful musical reunion.

We know Arnold is with us in spirit right now, and it is time to say "goodbye." He wants to leave us his favorite quote: "Be good to each other until we meet again."

Thank you from the Jacobs family.

Arnold Jacobs, former principal tuba of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, passed away in his home at the age of eighty-three on October 7, 1998. He was born in Philadelphia on June 11, 1915, and was raised in California. The product of a musical family, he credited his mother, a keyboard artist, for his original inspiration in music, and spent a good part of his youth progressing from bugle to trumpet to trombone and finally to tuba. He entered Philadelphia’s Curtis Institute of Music as a fifteen-year-old on scholarship.

After his graduation from Curtis in 1936, he played two seasons in the Indianapolis Symphony under Fabien Sevitzky. From 1939 to 1944 he was the tubist of the Pittsburgh Symphony under Fritz Reiner. In 1941 Mr. Jacobs toured the country with Leopold Stokowski and the All-American Youth Orchestra. He joined the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1944, and remained a member until his retirement in 1988.

During his forty-four-year tenure with the CSO, he took temporary leave in 1949 to tour England and Scotland with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He was on the faculty of Western State College’s Music Camp at Gunnison, Colorado, during the early 1960s. In June 1962 he had the honor of being the first tuba player invited to the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico. Mr. Jacobs, along with CSO colleagues, was part of the famous 1968 recording of Gabrieli’s music with members of the Philadelphia and Cleveland orchestras. He was a founding member of the Chicago Symphony Brass Quintet, appeared as soloist with the CSO on several occasions, and recorded Vaughan Williams’s Concerto for Tuba and Orchestra with Daniel Barenboim and the CSO.

Arnold Jacobs had an unparalleled reputation both as a master performer and master teacher. He taught tuba at Northwestern University’s School of Music and all wind instruments in his private studio. He was one of the most sought-after teachers in the world, specializing in respiratory and motivational applications for brass and woodwind instruments and voice. His students play in many orchestras throughout the world. He also lectured and gave clinics throughout the world.

Mr. Jacobs received the highest award of the Second International Brass Congress in 1984, and the highest award of the Midwest Brass Clinic in 1985. In 1994 the Chicago Federation of Musicians awarded him for Lifetime Achievement at the first Living Art of Music Award Ceremony. Mayor Richard M. Daley proclaimed June 25, 1995, Arnold Jacobs Day in Chicago as part of the celebration of his eightieth birthday. He received honorary doctor of music degrees from DePaul University and Vandercook College of Music. Two books written by students about Mr. Jacobs are available: Arnold Jacobs, The Legacy of a Master; by M. Dee Stewart, and Arnold Jacobs: Song and Wind by Brian Frederiksen.

Mr. Jacobs is survived by his wife of over sixty years, Gizella Valfy Jacobs; their son Dallas; grandson Robin Jacobs; and great-grandson Christopher Jacobs.
