

BRUNO STEINDEL GIVES UP HIS JOB WITH ORCHESTRA

That Bruno Steindel had resigned from the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and that his resignation had been accepted by the trustees was information sent out by the management last night, hard upon the news that Conductor Stock had withdrawn pending his acquisition of complete United States citizenship.

Steindel's leaving, by resignation or dismissal, had been expected, however, for the recent volley of allegations against the loyalty of members of the orchestra centered on him, and the hearings by Francis Borrelli, assistant to United States District Attorney Clyne, put on record definite and sworn statements to indicate that Steindel's conversation had been at variance with American ideas and the win-the-war spirit. He is a citizen.

As leader of the cellists, Steindel, coming to Chicago from the Philharmonic Orchestra of Berlin, has been a member of the Chicago Symphony since 1892. His service has been virtually continuous, save for a layoff of eight weeks imposed by the management some years ago as a penalty for having involved himself in a fight with the music critic for one of the Chicago newspapers. Steindel had resented the printed opinion that he had not played well in an orchestra concert, although the critic, in saying so, had classified the cellist as one of the world's best.

A successor to Steindel as first cellist is not named as yet.

Albert Loeb Adds $50 to Soldiers' Smoke Fund

Albert H. Loeb, vice-president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., knows something of what a smoke means to a fighting man with nerves frazzled by Hun shells and orders to go over the top. So he sent in a check yesterday. The score stands as follows:

Albert H. Loeb.....	$50.00
Warren W. Edwards, Hamilton club...	21.23
S. A. W.....	2.00
Previously acknowledged.....	$16,593.78

Total.....$16,667.01

Mr. Loeb, in sending the check, says it is in "payment of installment of tobacco fund for the month of October." The boys ought to be cheered by that.
